

Colloquium

Fig. 6.3. Frontispiece, J.K. McGuire, What Could Germany do for Ireland?, 1916.

„What Could Germany Do for Ireland?“

German Dimensions of 1916

University of Limerick, 28 September 2016

Room MC2005

9.30 Jérôme aan de Wiel (UCC) "We have no idealistic interest in Ireland and no revolution, no rifles"; Imperial Germany's half-hearted attempts to support Irish republicans, 1904-1919

10.15 Joachim Fischer (UL), Ireland under German rule: Two Irish dystopias of 1916/17

11.00 Coffee

11.30 Angus Mitchell (Limerick), On the wrong side of history: Roger Casement and Germany

12.15 Fergal Lenehan (Jena), Countering gay stereotypes on prime time television: The West German mini series Sir Roger Casement (1968)

13.00 Lunch

Everybody welcome

Supported by the School of Modern Languages & Applied Linguistics, the Ralahine Centre for Utopian Studies and the President of the University of Limerick, Prof. Don Barry

UNIVERSITY of LIMERICK
OLLSCOIL LUIMNIGH

Further information: Dr Joachim Fischer, School of Modern Languages & Applied Linguistics, University of Limerick Email: joachim.fischer@ul.ie